2011 DISTINGUISHED CONTRIBUTIONS TO SLAVIC, EAST EUROPEAN AND EURASIAN STUDIES AWARD

WINNER: NORMAN NAIMARK

The 2011 Distinguished Contributions to Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies Award, which honors senior scholars who have helped build and develop the field through scholarship, teaching, and service to the profession, is presented to Norman Naimark.

One of the world's preeminent historians of modern Central and Eastern Europe, Norman Naimark is the author of a remarkable range of books and articles that have carved new paths across the historical terrain of Russia, Germany, Poland, and the corridor between the Baltic and the Black Seas. Whether writing about Marxism in 19th-century Poland, the revolutionary movement in late Imperial Russia, the Soviet occupation of Germany, ethnic cleansing, or Stalin's genocides, Professor Naimark has combined meticulous research with sober, evidence-driven analyses of fundamental issues of power and political violence. His work, expressed in accessible, lucid prose, has reached enthusiastic audiences on both sides of the Atlantic. Two books in particular have been widely recognized as definitive works in their fields: The Russians in Germany: A History of the Soviet Zone of Occupation, 1945-1949 (1995) and Fires of Hatred: Ethnic Cleansing in Twentieth-Century Europe (2001).

Professor Naimark's international reputation rests not only on his scholarship but on his record as a stellar teacher and devoted mentor. In some four decades of teaching, first at Boston University and, since the late 1980s, at Stanford University, he has won numerous teaching awards and cultivated several generations of devoted graduate students who have gone on to become some of the leading scholars in the field of East European history. Furthermore, he has rendered exemplary service to his home universities, to colleagues at universities around the world, and to the wider fields of Slavic Studies and European History. He has served on the editorial boards of countless leading journals, worked on fellowship selection committees at virtually every major funding organization in his field, and, not least, given generously of his talent as president of ASEEEES.

Norman Naimark embodies academia's "Triple Threat": stellar and prolific scholarship, lasting impact as a teacher, and selfless service to the profession. As if that were not enough, he is also a gifted conversationalist, eager for intellectual exchange with colleagues young and old, and is universally known as a wonderful human being. ASEEEES is pleased and honored to recognize his distinguished contributions to our field.

THE WAYNE S. VUCINICH BOOK PRIZE

The Wayne S. Vucinich Book Prize sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Slavic Studies (ASEEES) and the Stanford University Center for Russian and East European Studies, is awarded annually for the most important contribution to Russian, Eurasian, and East European studies in any discipline of the humanities or social sciences published in English in the United States in the previous calendar year.

Winner: Matthew Jesse Jackson

Title: The Experimental Group: Ilya Kabakov, Moscow Conceptualism, Soviet Avant Gardes (Chicago University Press).

Matthew Jesse Jackson's book, The Experimental Group: Ilya Kabakov, Moscow Conceptualism, Soviet Avant Gardes, is an engaging, beautifully written, and erudite study of unofficial Soviet art. It makes a strong case for Kabakov's achievements across multiple art forms, and provides brilliant readings of numerous individual drawings, albums, mixed media work, and installations. Moving far beyond his own field of art history, Jackson makes a major statement about Soviet society, culture, and politics as a whole. Without idealizing the late Soviet period in the least, he shows how its norms of cultural conversation, the organization of work and free time, occasional but critical moments of access to Western innovations in the arts, emerging new philosophies of the artistic process, and the important role of viewer (or reader) response all conspired to make possible extraordinary art. Jackson prompts us to recognize the "period of stagnation" as a time of intellectual ferment--with the Soviet citizenry acting as the ultimate "experimental group." This monumental study of creativity in and after the late Soviet period is a remarkable scholarly achievement.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA BOOK PRIZE IN LITERARY AND CULTURAL STUDIES

The University of Southern California Book Prize in Literary and Cultural Studies, established in 2009, and sponsored by the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures at the USC, is awarded annually for an outstanding monograph published on Russia, Eastern Europe or Eurasia in the fields of literary and cultural studies in the previous calendar year.

Winner: James Loeffler

Title: The Most Musical Nation: Jews and Culture in the Late Russian Empire (Yale University Press).

The Most Musical Nation is a primary evaluation, a pervaia lastochka, in the study of the position of Jewish music and musicians within the mosaic of Russian culture during the period ca. 1900-1930. In investigating his subject, Loeffler reinforces the assumption that what is often described as "Russian" Modernism was, in fact, a synthesis of many ethnic ingredients. This fusion imparted a cosmopolitan vision and vital energy to Russian Symbolism and the avant-garde, which were among the most sophisticated movements of 20th century European arts and letters.

Loeffler examines the Jewish cultural experience and Jewish musical presence in late Imperial Russia both in the shtetl and in the metropolitan areas. He emphasizes key achievements of Rubinstein, Engel, Auer, Zimbalist and Elman, and, thereby, establishes an "ethnic" precedent to which so many, later Russian and Soviet musicians of Jewish extraction belonged. But, as Loeffler emphasizes, the Jewish cohort remained an organic part of Russian musical life, moving closely not only with the Russian elders of the Moscow Conservatoire, but also with the Russian prodigies and divas of the time. In placing the Jewish accomplishment within a broader Russian (rossiiskii) context of contemporary artists and composers, Loeffler amalgamates the two forces and implies that Russian music may, in fact, be more a "Eurasian" or even orientalist culture than an embellished borrowing of German, French and Italian conventions.

Of particular interest is the starting-point of many professional Jewish composers and performers, i.e. the domestic folk music of the shtetl and the strong ethnographical bias which this brought to their accomplishments. Ethnic allegiance molded compositions and deportments; cultural difference lay not in national identity, but in the fundamental difference between West and East. Loeffler also demonstrates that Jewish folk music served as both a storehouse of traditional values and as an agent of change: distinctive assets such as the cantonic nuances of the folk song or the bravura of the village fiddler were vital sources of inspiration to professional composers. Loeffler's account of the anthropological expedition through Western Russia and the Ukraine in 1912 is especially informative, describing, how Engel recorded Yiddish songs in the Pale of Settlement, thus saving an entire cultural legacy for posterity. Loeffler's monograph boasts many such piquant morsels of information, the sum of which makes for an entertaining as well as enlightening narrative. Such episodes and interludes form a vital part of what Loeffler describes as "forgotten stories... [which] challenge the simple narratives about how Jewish and European cultures developed as a whole." Loeffler's observations constitute a rich and sophisticated appreciation of the most musical nation.

THE REGINALD ZELNIK BOOK PRIZE IN HISTORY

The Reginald Zelnik Book Prize in History, established in 2009 and sponsored by the Institute of Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies at the University of California, Berkeley, is awarded annually for an outstanding monograph published on Russia, Eastern Europe or Eurasia in the field of history in the previous calendar year.

Winner: Matthew E. Lenoë

Title: The Kirov Murder and Soviet History (Yale University Press).

Matthew Lenoë's meticulous and nuanced investigation of the December 1, 1934 assassination of Leningrad Party Secretary Sergei Kirov — a major turning point in the history of Stalinism — and of its subsequent role in Stalinist and post-Stalinist Soviet political life is nothing short of a tour de force. Based on hundreds of newly available Party and KGB documents, The Kirov Murder and Soviet History is a model of archival detective work, painstaking research, and the most careful and judicious consideration of evidence, while simultaneously being a true crime thriller and a major contribution to understanding the high politics behind the Stalinist purges.

Like the Kennedy assassination in the U.S., the Kirov murder spawned persistent conspiracy theories, ranging from Stalin's own hyperbolic linkage of the crime with both the former opposition and the Nazis to anti-Stalinists who saw the Soviet dictator's own hand behind that of the gunman. Lenoë carefully and patiently debunks these theories, demonstrating that Leonid Nikolaev, the pathetically troubled killer, acted alone. Yet Lenoë also shows clearly how the killing and the regime's response to it revealed much about the social and political crisis of the 1930s and the evolving nature of Stalin's increasingly paranoid regime. The book includes translated texts of 125 critical documents, allowing readers to test Lenoë's detailed arguments on their own. Often reconstructing events on an hour-by-hour basis, Lenoë manages to hold readers spellbound until the final pages of his 872 page masterpiece.

Honorable Mention: Rochelle Goldberg Ruthchild

Title: Equality and Revolution: Women's Rights in the Russian Empire, 1905-1917 (University of Pittsburgh Press).

In her elegantly written study of the women's suffrage movement in the early 20th century, Ruthchild demonstrates how Russian women and their movement for suffrage and gender equality were central to the social changes and revolutionary politics of late tsarism. Previous studies of prerevolutionary Russian feminism emphasized the movement's privileged character and the tensions between its allegedly "bourgeois" activists on one side and women workers and socialists on the other. Equality and Revolution demonstrates, however, that socialists and feminists often worked in tandem within a broader democratic movement, and that, at critical moments, their joint struggle for gender equality drove the broader revolutionary and democratic movements forward. As a consequence, Russian women were in early 1917 the first of their gender in a major power to gain the franchise. Ruthchild also situates the Russian women's movement in a broader international context and brings back to life several influential but long-forgotten figures in the movement. Eschewing ideology for compelling narrative based on a broad base of archival and rare published primary sources, Ruthchild succeeds in restoring Russian women to their rightful place at the center of the revolutionary narrative and in relating their compelling and gripping tale with compassion and dignity.

THE ASEES DAVIS CENTER BOOK PRIZE IN POLITICAL AND SOCIAL STUDIES

The ASEES Davis Center Book Prize in Political and Social Studies, established in 2008, and sponsored by the Kathryn W. and Shelby Cullom Davis Center for Russian and Eurasian Studies at Harvard University, is awarded annually for an outstanding monograph published on Russia, Eurasia, or Eastern Europe in anthropology, political science, sociology, or geography in the previous calendar year.

Winner: Kristen Ghodsee

Title: Muslim Lives in Eastern Europe: Gender, Ethnicity, and the Transformation of Islam in Postsocialist Bulgaria (Princeton University Press).

Kristen Ghodsee's Muslim Lives in Eastern Europe: Gender, Ethnicity, and the Transformation of Islam in Postsocialist Bulgaria is a sophisticated, nuanced analysis of shifting identities in post-socialist eastern Europe. Focusing on the Pomaks in a former mining town in southern Bulgaria, she argues that the rise of a more "orthodox" Islamic identity in Bulgaria is driven by a mixture of international factors and the local socioeconomic context. As result of these factors, Islamist institutions have become a viable substitute for both workplace and social supports that were damaged by the end of socialism by providing jobs, focus and community. Drawing on a wide range of evidence including ethnographic studies, evaluations of the use of public spaces, and analyses of economic conditions and religious publications, Ghodsee has written an exceptional book that makes an important contribution to our field and is relevant for a broad community of scholars.

Honorable Mention: Sarah Phillips

Title: Disability and Mobile Citizenship in Postsocialist Ukraine (Indiana University Press).

The prize committee unanimously agreed that Sarah Phillips' rich ethnographic study, Disability and Mobile Citizenship in Postsocialist Ukraine, deserves significant mention. This study provides an important perspective on civic organizations in new democracies. Phillips' compelling and beautifully written narrative argues that civic organizations in Ukraine are largely driven by personal need and access to scarce resources. The study provides a rich history of state policy and social attitudes toward disabled citizens in the Soviet space. As such, Phillips' study breaks important new ground in addressing the concerns of the disabled as well as the structural impediments to the formation of civic organizations in post-Communist states.

THE ASEES MARSHALL SHULMAN PRIZE

The ASEES Marshall Shulman Prize, sponsored by the Harriman Institute of Columbia University, is awarded annually for an outstanding monograph dealing with the international relations, foreign policy, or foreign-policy decision-making of any of the states of the former Soviet Union or Eastern Europe. The prize is dedicated to the encouragement of high quality studies of the international behavior of the countries of the former Communist Bloc.

Winner: Lara J. Nettelfield

Title: Courting Democracy in Bosnia and Herzegovina: The Hague Tribunal's Impact in a Postwar State (Cambridge University Press).

Lara J. Nettelfield's Courting Democracy in Bosnia and Herzegovina: The Hague Tribunal's Impact in a Postwar State makes a significant contribution to the study of transitional justice in the fields of international relations theory and international law. Through ethnographic research, interviews, and survey data, Nettelfield is able to demonstrate that the current scholarship on transitional justice too narrowly specifies the possible effects of international courts, such as the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. She shows that the court has had a range of positive effects on the ground in Bosnia and Herzegovina, even if they are not the effects theorized by scholars or even intended by the ICTY itself. Nettelfield's work demonstrates the promise held out by multiple methodological approaches. Without her ethnographic sensibility, her years of on-the-ground soaking and poking, and her fielding a survey that had already been executed by other scholars in a different time and place, she never would have been able to redefine the way we think about the possible salutary effects of transitional justice.

THE ED A. HEWETT PRIZE

The Ed A. Hewett Prize, sponsored by the National Council for Eurasian and East European Research (NCEEER), is awarded annually for an outstanding publication on the political economy of the centrally planned economies of the former Soviet Union and East Central Europe and their transitional successors. Ed A. Hewett was a distinguished scholar, a fine colleague, and an internationally respected member of the field. The Hewett Prize was established in 1994 in his honor to recognize and encourage the high standard of scholarship that he so admirably advanced in the area of his interests.

Winner: Timothy Frye

Title: Building States and Markets after Communism: The Perils of Polarized Democracy (Cambridge University Press).

Frye uses both quantitative and narrative data from the former Soviet bloc to throw new light on the pace and consistency of post-communist reforms. He shows that reforms were faster and more consistent when the political system was democratic. He shows, however, that the benign influence of democracy was conditional on low political and socio-economic polarization. In less polarized democracies, governments built state capacity and competitive markets at the same time. With more polarization, governments faced shorter time horizons and responded to strong incentives to weaken the state and undermine competition in order to reward supporters. Polarized democracies pursued reforms at a slower pace, with less perseverance and more wavering, less generous assistance for losers, and worse economic outcomes. The outcomes of polarized democracy were better than those of autocracy, but worse than those of democracies that were less divided.

Building States and Markets works on many levels. Elegant modelling is blended with sophisticated econometrics. Cross-country data are filled out with detailed case studies; micro-level data from business surveys complement the macro-level inferences. It considers explicitly the potential endogeneity of polarization on reforms and makes a compelling argument about the socialist-era roots of reform-era polarization. Building States and Markets is highly original and will undoubtedly influence the literature on economic reform and state building for many years.

Honorable Mention: Yoshiko Herrera

Title: Mirrors of the Economy: National Accounts and International Norms in Russia and Beyond (Cornell University Press).

Herrera sets out to explain the speed and comprehensiveness of Russia's adoption of GDP accounting in the 1990s, a change that was critical for economic measurement and policy evaluation. It is argued that the rapid transition of Russia's national accounts should be a surprise, given that most other Russian reforms were incomplete, contested, or compromised. Her book proposes an innovative explanation in terms of conditional norms. In the belief system of Soviet statisticians, a socialist economy was best evaluated by material product accounting, and market economies by GDP. When Russia became a market economy, this conditional norm enabled them rapidly to adjust beliefs to new conditions. A textured narrative of rapid organizational reform carried out by insiders, Mirrors of the Economy is thoroughly grounded in the contemporary and historical literatures, complemented by many interviews with Russian principals.

THE BARBARA JELAVICH BOOK PRIZE

The Barbara Jelavich Book Prize, sponsored by Charles Jelavich, is awarded annually for a distinguished monograph published on any aspect of Southeast European or Habsburg studies since 1600, or nineteenth- and twentieth-century Ottoman or Russian diplomatic history. The Jelavich Prize was established in 1995 in her memory to recognize and to encourage the high standards she set in her many areas of scholarly interest and to promote continued study of those areas.

Winner: Sean McMeekin

Title: The Berlin-Baghdad Express: The Ottoman Empire and Germany's Bid for World Power (Belknap Press of Harvard University Press).

The work is a fast-paced, dramatic account of German efforts to undermine the British Empire during World War I. With its ambition to build a railroad from Berlin to Baghdad, imperial Germany had already established itself as a significant player in the Near East in the years before 1914. Once the war broke out, Germans sought to foment internal revolt among Muslims living under British, French and Russian rule. Germany heartily endorsed the Ottoman declaration of jihad against the Allied Powers, and continued throughout the war to build on its prewar economic and military influence in the region. McMeekin manages to weave together a narrative that includes historical figures high and low. The cast of characters includes Great Power statesmen and diplomats, military strategists, orientalist scholars, Zionist and Arab leaders, and a collection of other colorful schemers seeking profit in the region. He has written a beautifully crafted book, based on extensive research in multiple languages and archives in several countries. The author is an intrepid researcher. The committee commends McMeekin for his gifts as a storyteller; with an appreciation for the absurd, he tells a serious and sweeping tale of Great Power intrigue. In so doing, he breathes new life into what historical actors referred to as the Eastern Question. McMeekin succeeds in putting the Ottoman Empire and the East again at the center of the history of the period. The book revisits big questions and recasts the way we look at a crucial period in European and Near Eastern history. It is an excellent example of international history, and does the Jelavich-inspired tradition of Ottoman diplomatic history proud.

THE KULCZYCKI PRIZE FOR POLISH STUDIES

The Kulczycki Prize (formerly the ASEES/Orbis Books Prize for Polish Studies), sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Kulczycki, is awarded annually for the best book in any discipline, on any aspect of Polish affairs.

Winner: Antony Polonsky

Title: The Jews in Poland and Russia, vol. I, 1350-1881 and vol. II, 1881-1914. (The Littman Library of Jewish Civilization).

The first two volumes of Antony Polonsky's The Jews in Poland and Russia comprise a truly landmark study of East European Jewish history from the mid-fourteenth century to the outbreak of World War I. This work is an invaluable synthetic exposition of Jewish civilization in Poland and Russia that also pays close attention to the larger historical context in which Jewish history unfolded in these areas. While exhaustive in presenting historical detail and utilizing available sources and data of all types, Polonsky is also masterful in conveying the texture of Jewish life in different regions during each period. His study weaves together numerous aspects of that life -- among others, the relationship of Jewish communities to the states in the region and their governance mechanisms; Jewish religious and political movements; the evolving role of the synagogue in communities; the wide variety of Jewish organizations over time and space; cultural changes, including the development of the mass press, modern literature, and theater; the experiences of Jewish women; and descriptions of the towns and cities in which Jewish history played out.

The contribution of Polonsky's study, however, is not only an impressive synthesis of a vast topic and vast amount of information. In integrating all of this material, the author also deftly crafts his own interpretations of trends in the area and the timing of shifts in them. His marshaling of evidence and his own insights add up to a compelling set of arguments about the course of Jewish history. Polonsky addresses Jewish, Polish, and Russian historical developments all with great nuance, and that depth of understanding allows him to present the complexities of these intertwined histories with a subtlety rarely achieved in projects of such ambitious temporal and spatial scope. This study will become the "go to" reference for scholars of East European Jewish history for a long time to come.

Honorable Mention: Bożena Shallcross,

Title: The Holocaust Object in Polish and Polish-Jewish Culture (Indiana University Press).

THE GRADUATE STUDENT ESSAY PRIZE

The Graduate Student Essay Prize is awarded for an outstanding essay by a graduate student in Slavic studies.

Winner: Jolanta Mickute

Title: "Making of the Zionist Woman: Zionist Discourse on the Jewish Woman's Body and Sexuality."

The winner of the 2011 graduate student essay prize is Jolanta Mickute of Indiana University for her paper "Making of the Zionist Woman: Zionist Discourse on the Jewish Woman's Body and Sexuality." This sophisticated and highly original article scrambles what we thought we knew about interwar politics and culture. Mickute accomplishes this not by debunking existing stories or interpretations, but by simply looking at familiar topics from a novel perspective. The ideological categories of left and right, the ethno-national labels of Polish and Jewish, and the political categories of state and society all appear in a new light when seen through the eyes of the women Mickute studies. They were emphatically Jewish, yet their worldviews only make sense when understood within a richly detailed context that they shared with non-Jewish Poles. Their Zionism pulled them towards nationalism (with the imposition of sexual discipline that this implied), yet their modernity and revolutionary politics pushed them towards personal and sexual emancipation. Mickute employs an impressive range of public and private sources to illustrate both the discursive construction of the "Zionist Woman" and the ways in which actual women constructed their own subjectivities within that identity. This essay is a chapter of a dissertation tentatively entitled "Modern, Jewish, and Female," that promises to be an major scholarly accomplishment.

THE ROBERT C. TUCKER/STEPHEN F. COHEN PRIZE

The Robert C. Tucker/Stephen F. Cohen Prize, sponsored by the JKW Foundation, is awarded annually (if there is a distinguished submission) for an outstanding English-language doctoral dissertation defended at an American or Canadian university in the tradition of historical political science and political history of Russia or the Soviet Union as practiced by Robert C. Tucker and Stephen F. Cohen.

Co-Winner: Ora John Reuter

Title: "The Origin of Dominant Parties", Ph. D., Political Science, Emory U

Reuter uses a full range of published sources and interviews to examine the large question of why dominant political parties emerge in some non-democracies and not in others. The dissertation focuses on post-Soviet Russia and the story of the post-1991 failure of two ruling parties and, more recently, the emergence of a "successful" ruling party, United Russia. Deploying historical analysis as well as a rich conceptual model that views the issue as one of two-sided commitment between central leaders and other (usually regional) elites, Reuter shows that Russia's ruling parties' projects failed in the 1990s because regional elites were so strong that they would not link their political machines and fates to any ruling party project. By contrast, United Russia became strong after 2000 because elites were still strong enough to require cooptation, but not strong enough to defect from the ruling party. Data on Russian governors and regional legislators show that those with independent resources and political or economic power bases were more reluctant to join the dominant party. They only came around when benefits of membership outweighed costs of remaining independent. The dissertation also provides the first detailed account of the role of United Russia in Russia's political system. The discussion of incentives and cadres is especially rich and provides much material to help assess the potential of democracy in Russia. Finally, the author examines the global context and data on all dominant parties in the world's non-democracies since 1946. Dominant parties only emerge when neither leaders nor elites have a preponderance of control over resources. The model is presented with extraordinary clarity as are future research questions on the nature of dominant parties and democratization.

The Robert C. Tucker/Stephen F. Cohen Prize, sponsored by the JKW Foundation, is awarded annually (if there is a distinguished submission) for an outstanding English-language doctoral dissertation defended at an American or Canadian university in the tradition of historical political science and political history of Russia or the Soviet Union as practiced by Robert C. Co-Winner: Eleonory Gilburd

Title: "To See Paris and Die: Western Culture in the Soviet Union, 1950's and 1960's," Ph. D., History, UC, Berkeley

Gilburd raises the timeless question of Russia's relationship to the west in strikingly new and subtle ways. This work considers the manner in which the "west", that is western culture, entered the Khrushchev era Soviet Union and indeed was appropriated and internalized and made Soviet in ways that transformed the western imports into part of Soviet culture and identity themselves. This original conception is worked out in several vividly articulated and massively detailed case studies, each one based upon extraordinarily deep sources (archival, textual). For Gilburd, Soviet exposure to the west was part of intra-European cultural traffic. The Soviet Union of the late 1950's and 1960's was an integral participant in the cross-Atlantic and pan-European circulation of ideas, sounds and texts. She highlights the emergence of exchange agreements and cultural pursuits as integral to Soviet daily practices. Ultimately the relationship between Russia and the "foreign" is expressed as a claim to ownership or disavowal. One of the authors' most striking arguments is that Russian society took hold of the "foreign" and claimed Western cultural artifacts and phenomena as Russia's property. The major case studies are cultural exchange agreements and "friendship;" the VI International Youth Festival in Moscow, 1957; museum-going (the European heritage of impressionism Rockwell Kent and Picasso); and translation and channels of literary transmission. This rich work provides new insights into Soviet identity and cultural dynamics and ultimately into politics in the broadest sense.

DISTINGUISHED LIBRARIAN AWARD

The Committee on Library and Information Resources of the Association for Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies (ASEEES CLIR) has conferred this year's Distinguished Librarian Award to Allan Urbanic. This prize was established in 2010 to recognize outstanding leadership in the field of Slavic, East European and Eurasian librarianship and to show formal appreciation for a recipient's sustained impact in promoting and strengthening the profession.

Winner: Allan Urbanic, UC, Berkeley

The Committee on Library and Information Resources of the Association for Slavic, East European, and Eurasian Studies (ASEEES CLIR) is pleased to award the 2011 Distinguished Service Award to one of our most revered colleagues, Allan Urbanic (University of California, Berkeley). This prize was established in 2010 to recognize outstanding leadership in the field of Slavic, East European and Eurasian librarianship and to show formal appreciation for a recipient's sustained impact in promoting and strengthening the profession.

Allan Urbanic (A.B. Boston College, M.L.S. Simmons College, Ph.D. Brown University) has served as a scholar and librarian in the field of Slavic and East European Studies for over thirty years. He began his tenure at the University of California, Berkeley in 1986, after working for several years in the Slavic Department of Harvard College Library. Allan has been a leader in developing library collections, and an advocate of collaboration in collection development. He has been at the forefront of efforts to document Russian émigré works throughout the world. He has promoted online Slavic resources, and has fostered communication among Slavic librarians nationally and internationally.

Allan's interest in documenting Russian émigré works has been a hallmark of his activity, resulting in outstanding bibliographies on Russian émigré literature and serials that capture successive waves of Russian emigration, and lend valuable access to rare Russian items in the Museum of Russian Culture in San Francisco, the Hoover Institution and the University of California, Berkeley. He has led grant-funded efforts to preserve collections of newspapers published by émigré communities of the Pacific Rim, and has made unique efforts to microfilm rare émigré titles, many of which have been sent to Russian libraries to enhance their collections.

Allan's impact on the field has been tremendous. He has chaired and served on numerous committees within ASEEEES and the American Library Association's Slavic and East European Section. Allan established the Slavlibs listserv, the primary venue for communication among Slavic, East European and Eurasian librarians in the world, and has maintained it for almost twenty years.

Known to longstanding colleagues for his good humor and friendliness, Allan has also reached out to newer members of the field, serving as a mentor and a "big brother," strengthening foundations for future scholarship. Allan's impact and legacy in the field of Slavic and East European librarianship will endure.
